TELEPHONE No. 12.

Hongkong, August 31st. 1889.

THE Consular report on the trade of Yokohama-which reachedus by last mail-shows a flourishing conditionof-aff-tire, the total value of the trade for 1888 revealing an increase of 221 per cent, on that of the previous year. This is the more satisfactory since the trade of 1887 showed as advance on that of $86. The gross value of the trade for $88was £12,668,450; that of the imports beng 26,391,707, and that of the exports 26,276,748. The import of cotton manufictures shows an increase over that of 1887 amounting to £1,689,021 against £1,163,544; but that of woolien and mixed woollen and cotton manufactures exhibits a slight decrease, the figures being £733,808 against The total of imports and exports for 1888thus 2785,369. Metals including manufactured being 24,158,317, a very fair proportion of the were in ported to the tune of £806.229 as | whole foreign trade of Japan. Most of the nail rod comes from Bel-"gium. Deliveries is 1888 of bars, plates, and sheets, as also of pig iron, showed an increase over of these of 1887, but these of tin-plates showed a falling off of 1,400 loxes. The import of rails was 38,651 tons as compared with 22,170 in 1887. These were chiefly of British manufacture. The steel imported for hipbuilding purposes by There will be no afternoon service. the Navy Department mostly comes from France. The import of brown augar amounted last year to 81,733,698lbe. asagainst 69,807,892 lbs. in 1887; and of white to 52,798,497 lbs. as compared with 45,684,128lbs. in 1887. The trade in brown sugar is mainly in the hands of Chinese merchants. The white consists chiefly of the refined sugar from the Hongkong refineries. The Consul says that the relative positions between the imports of in January next.

brown and white sugars were maintained in about the same proportions as in 1887, but in the estimation of consumers. Deliveries of kerosine in 1888 were 1.844.294 cases against, 1,175,422 cases in the preceding year. The principal feature in this of Russian oil from Batoum. It did not however, find much favour with dealers, as the cases and time in which it is packed are roughly made and a large percentage of leakage is the result: As a consequence of this, remarks Mr. TROUP, the oil has been precluded from being transported into the interior and its consumption has been restricted to Yokohama and Tokyo. . .

is growing yearly. The export in 1888 was the largest ever recorded since the country was opened to foreign trade. The soullementa for the year were returned at 5.350,000 lbs., and the value of the expert £4.884.927 against £3,416,885 in 1887. Mr. TRous says the Government is fostering the industry in every direction, and yearly increasing orops may be expected as the result, checked only by climatic or other causes. Year by year, too, an improvement is visible in the reeling and preparing of Japan silk; the best models for the work are studied : and there crop depends to a certain extent on the raw These medicines combined have long ranked silk and will doubtless increase with it, and as product improves also. Tes, the next export in point of value and importance, showed a considerable falling off both in amount and value on the expert of 1887, the figures being 23,808,714 lbs. as against 26,557,616 lbs. in export is to the United States and Canada. A falling off in the quantity of copper exported was apparent, the figures being-

1888. 4.672 tons: 1887. 4.971 tons. The values, however, show a balance in favour of 1888, the figure being £249,811 against £187,529 in 1887. This was due to the action of the copper syndicate in putting up therates. The decline in the export is trace ble no doubt in part to the extinction of the demand for India, a result of the high prices ruling. The crop of tobacco last year was a poor one both as to quantity and quality. The best quality is in some demand for perhaps the most striking as to quantity is that of silk handkerchiefs, over 4,000,000 of which, valued at £187,303, were shipped in 1888. The number of vessels of foreign design which entered the nort of Yokohama last year was 2,894, of an aggregate of 2,025,762 tons, being an increase in tonnage over 1887 of

A new departure—which is also a commendable improvement and valuable addition—has been made in the report for 1888 by Mr. Thoup, which he explains as follows:-" In the third table of the returns an endeayour is made to distinguish the British trade with Yokohama, by combining the amounts received from the customs of the declared imports and exports from and to the British Islands, Canada, Australia, and the East Indies. It would appear from this return that the trade between these portions of the British Empire and Yokohama amounts to 33 per cent, of the total foreign trade of the port. This return, however, is trade being, in the customs statistics, included in that with China, and its apparate figures not now obtainable. In previous tea industry in China and in the East generally, vesze, however, the declared trade with Hongkong has been separately given in the tion, may be taken as equal, at least, to a third of the whole foreign trade of Yok hama. It would, no doubt, be inaccurate to designate all this as British trade, inasmuch as Hongkong is an entre ot of the trade with South China and the Continent of Europe, as well as with places in the British dominions. Nevertheless, a large proportion of it would, were it distinguishable, properly fall to be added to the return British trade." It may perhaps be of some interest to give the figures from this table flag there was a decrease of 11 per cent.

After this the two women were taken to the house of Sved Abdullas Alkadari where one of them had her hands tied together above her head. Elie was then suspended to a tree by her hands for three hours, after which she received fifty lashes on her bare back with a ratter. This woman was reported to be in a delicate condition at the time. "The other woman had her nose and ears cutoff and was then stripped naked and received eighty lashes with the ration, from the effects of which she was covered with blood. Sved Abbullah Alkadari than ordered his men to rub her body with a mixture of sall, tamariad and vinegar. She is now lying insensible and unable to move a muscle or utter a sound, and is not expecied to live long. Syed Abdullah Alkadari has given orders that she is to be kept in chains till shedies. These are not the only examples of this tyunt's cruelties, nor is he theonly one of his nation who inflicts such punishments. Not long age another Arab named Syed Saik, without any provocation, ordered one his female slaves to be put in chains, and then had her burnt with a red-hot iron in a manner too atrocious to be described. The cries of this poor victim were heartrending. It is said that the Raiah himself is n tso cruel as the Arabs. If any of his slaves offend him, he sells them and so reimburses himself against loss. At the same time he takes no steps to put a stop to the brutality of the other slave drivers. He says that if they prefer to murder a slave rather than sell they do the mackes harm by incurring the loss of a servant for whom they have had to pay. Two Armenians, who were in Ampanan on the let of August, offered to purchase these four slaves from Syed Abdullah Alkadari for the snu of $400 to save them from death, but their

> Now First Published. CHAPTER XII. SUNLOCKS, I AM COMING.

It was early suspense, and the day was hot there had been three weeks of drought, and th roads were dusty. Adam walked with a ston blackthorn stick, his flacoid floure sometimes swaving for poise and balance, and his snow white heir rising gently in the soft breeze over his tender old face, now ploughed so deep with lab or and sorrow. Chalse was driving his carrier's cart, whereou sat all that was left of Adam's belongings, save only what the good man carried in his purse. And seeing how heavy the road was to one of Adum's years, though own were hardly fewer, moor old Chaise, recking i nothing of dignity lost thereby, would have had, him to mount the shafts and perch on the box behind the pony's tail. But Adam, thinking as little of pride, said No. that every herring should hang by its own gill, and the pony had its full day's work before it: moreover, that it was his right to walk at his own expense now, having ridden (wenty years at the expense of the island. So he kept the good blackthorn moving, and Greeks stepped along nimbly by his side. And when the Casiletown coach overtook and passed them on its way to Douglas, and some of the farming folk who rode on it loaned over saucily and bailed Adam by his Christian name, he showed no shame or rancour, until, when the wach was gone, he caught a gimpse of the hot colour that had mounted to Greeba's cheeks. Then, without a word, he turned his mellow o'd face to his feet, and strude slong a good half mile in silence.

And meantime. Chalse, thinking to lighten the burden of the way with cheerful talk, rattled along in his crazy acreech on many subjects, but found that all came round, by some strange hands clenched together, But now she stepped us." twist, to the one subject that might not be dis-Thus looking at his none he told of the donkey he had before it, the same that Nichael Sunlecks rode long years ago; how he himself had fallen sick and could not keep it, and so gave it without a bonny to a neighbour for feeding it and how when he got better he wanted to bor row it, but the neighbour in base ingratitude and selfishness would not lend it without pay. " Faith, it's alwis lek that," said ( halso, "" Give a man yer shirt, and ye must cut yer lucky or he'll be after axing ye for ver skin."

Then feeling in his vague way that there was something aniss with such comfort, he wen back from his doukey to himself, mying that it this world it was "poor once, poor alwig," and that if fute was straight agen ye you were like a lugger without helm and anchor, rollin' in the throw of the san, and however ye prayed for blessin it was mighty ticklish etearin', and you were sure and sartin to get foul of some other fella's jib, or tangled in another fella's nets, and when you'd ranked and tore yer best, no matter how you steered, you were safe to strike on a rock Then again he felt himself on the wrong tack and began afresh, and flou dered once more; and each time he set out to say semething that haply might not come amiss he took off his stocking cap and stroked his twisted bair down over his

When they came by Douglas, Chalse was for kirting round it by the Spring Valley through Braddon, but old Adam, seeing his drift, would not pretend to be innocent of it, and said that i there were dregs in his cap he was in the way of draining them without making too many wr faces about it. And as for the people of the town, if they thought no shame to stare at him he thought no shame to be stared at, yet that what was good enough for himself might not be so for one who had less deserved it, and Greebs could go with Chalse by Braddon, and they would meet again on Onehan Hill

To this Greebs would not consent; and as it chanced there was little need, for when they got into Douglas the town was all astir with many was risees and great troops of people making for the quares that up one seemed so much as to we the little company of three that came covered with dust out of the country roads.

" Aw. bad cose what icel is this?" said Chalse and before they, had crossed the little market place by the larbour, where the bells of old St. Matthew's rang out a merry peal, they learned for certain the cause of the joyful commotion: for there they were all but run down by the awaying and surging crowds that came shorting and obsering by the side of an open carriage, wherein sut a very old goutleman in the uniform of a soldier - It was, as Adam had already divined the new Governor General Colonal Corisland as the first direct representative of the Michael Sunlocks now, sir? Is he longing for had just been turned away from it. And not Man. And at that brave sight poor old Chalse. who jumbled in his distraught brain the ides of four years ago?"
